SURAT THANI

Tourist Information

INTRODUCTION

Surat Thani is southern Thailand's largest province, some 12,800 square kilometres, and has an extensive coastline lapped by limpid Thai Gulf waters.

Besides beautiful beaches, Surat Thani boasts some of Thailand's loveliest tropical islands, namely the Penang-sized Ko Samui, Thailand's second largest island, palmfringed jewel of a sparkling archipelago that includes the stunning 250-square-kilometre Angthong (Golden Bowl) Marine National Park.

Surat Thani once formed part, and may have been the centre, of the Mahayana Buddhist Srivichaya Empire which, steeped in legend and mystery. Dominated the Malay peninsula and much of Java some 1,500 years ago. Srivichaya was best described by the itinerant Chinese monk I Chinga after a pilgrimage he made to India during the late 600's (A.D.). Archaeological discoveries at Chaiya district indicate the former empire's splendour.

ATTRACTIONS

City Attractions

Surat Thani's provincial capital is 685 kilometres south of Bangkok by Highway No.4, and Highway No.41 from Chumphon. The city is a thriving modern commercial, entertainment and communications centre, and the air gateway from Bangkok to southern Thailand.

The Khao Tapet Nature & Wildlife Centre is some 6 kilometres from town along the Surat-Nasarn Road, Highway 4009, and cover 1,162 acres. The centre houses many caged wild animals. The hilltop, some 210 metres above sea level, offers panoramic views of Bandon municipality, the Tapi River and Bandon Bay Guest house are available at the centre. Advance booking is necessary.

Si Surat Stupa, also locally known as Phra That Khao Tapet, is on the summit of Tapet Hill in the Khao Tapet Nature & Wildlife Centre. The stupa houses Buddha relics donated by the Indian government some 30 years ago. Architecturally, the shrine embodies Srivichaya and Bangkok-period styles.

The Tapi River Estuary is some 5 kilometres from Bandon municipality. The area is particularly rich in quality seafood restaurants.

Out-of-City Attractions.

KANCHANADIT DISTRICT

A Monkey school is located some 13 kilometres along the Surat-Kanchanadit Road, Highway 401. Monkeys are trained to pick coconuts. Most 'students' are pig-tailed monkeys captured from the forests. Training usually takes some 3 months. Visitors are advised to check with local travel agents (SEE GENERAL INFORMATION) for full details.

Oyster Farms are found around the estuarine are as of the Kadaeh and Ta Tong Rivers. Oysters bred there are substantially larger than those found elsewhere. Those interested in visiting th farms, and observing oysters being harvested, may hire long-tailed boats which carry 8 to 10 persons. It takes some 30 minutes to reach the farms from Ta Tong quayside. The service costs 100 baht.

DONSAK DISTRICT

Wipawadee Waterfall, some 30 kilometres from town along the Surat-Nakhon Road, is at Pak Praek village. The picturesque, medium-sized waterfall enjoys bucolic surroundings and attracts many visitors during public holidays.

Wat Khao Suwan Pradit the temple was founded by Luang Po Choi, one of southern Thailand's most esteemed monks. The very beautiful hilltop pagoda, some 45 metres in height, contains Buddha relics and is visible from afar

CHAIYA DISTRICT

Wat Suan Mokka Phalaram, better known as 'Suan Mok', is on Highway No.41 some 50 kilometres north of the provincial capital. Suan Mok is an unusual 150-acre forest temple. The monastic community follows the simple regimen of the Buddha's earliest disciples. Suan Mok is devoid of extravagant ceremonial and elaborate chapels with multi-tiered roofs. Sculpture workshops dot the forested enclave, and physical labour is an essential part of the community's lifestyle.

Suan Mok's founder, Bhikkhu Buddhadasa, is highly respected in Thailand, and internationally, and his 'back-to-basics' approach attracts Buddhist monks and lay meditators from Europe, North and South America, Australia and Japan.

A favourite sight for casual visitors is the 'Spiritual Theatre' which Buddhadasa describes as 'a pictorial interpretation of Dharma. The building features an eclectic mixture of Thai, Egyptian, Chinese, Indian, Japanese, Tibetan and European-style murals and sculptures.

Phra Borom That Chaiya is 54 kilometres north of the provincial capital, and 1 kilometre from Chaiya railway station. The revered, elaborately restored, more than 1200-year-old pagoda contains Buddha relics and is a direct line with the Srivichaya empire. A small museum in the temple compound houses artifacts from the vicinity.

Phumriang Village, some 6 kilometres east of Chaiya, is an arts and crafts centre well known for its gold and silverbrocade silk cloth and jute headwear.

PHANOM DISTRICT

Khao Sok National Park is largely jungle with complex mountain ranges and high cliffs. The park office is 1.3 kilometres off the Surat-Takuapa Road at Km. 109. Many wild animals include elephants, bantengs, tapirs, bison, bears and black panthers. Places worth visiting within the park, mostly by foot, include the Sip Et Chan (Eleven Stage) Waterfall, some 4 kilometres from the park office; the Mae Yai (Mother-in-Law) Waterfall, which can be reached by car; and several other waterfalls and caves, reached exclusively by foot. Dormitory and camping accommodation is available. Advance booking for lodgings and food, should be made through the National Parks Division in Bangkok (Tel: 579-0529 or 579-4842).

Amphoe Ban Ta Khun

Ratchaprapha or Chieo Lan Dam. It is located on Km. 52-53 Highway 401 about 70 kms. from Surat Thani and turn right for another 12 kms. The scenery around the dam area is very beautiful. Accommodations are available from the Electricity Generating Authority of Thailand, Tel. (02) 4363170 or Ratchaprapha Dam Office Tel. (077) 311522, 3114364

SAMUI DISTRICT

Ko Samui is Surat Thani's major tourist attraction. This beautiful 247-square-kilometre island is 268 nautical miles south of Bangkok and some 84 kilometres east of Surat Thani provincial capital. Ko Samui measures some 21 kilometres at its widest point and 25 kilometres at its longest. A 51-kilometre ring road largely encircles the island, which has numerous lovely beaches and bays, and is almost literally and island of coconuts and forested hills. Samui's best beaches line the northern and eastern coasts, the most popular being Chaweng and Lamai where, generally, attractive accommodation are found. Besides beaches, other island attractions include the Hin Lat and Na Muang waterfalls; the phallic rock formations at the southern end of Lamai Bay; a massive seated Buddha image on Fan isle in Plai Laem Bay; and Na Thon, the island's major seafront settlement where shops, restaurants, tour agencies are located.

Angthong Marine National Park comprises some 40 islands northwest of Ko Samui and covers 250 square kilometres, of which 50 square kilometres is land mass. The most attractive islands include Ko Wua Talap (Sleeping Cow island), Ko Mae Ko (Moter island), Ko Prayat (Economical island), Ko Sam Sao (Tripod island), Ko Nai Pud (Mr Pud's island), and Ko Wua Teh (Kicking Cow island). Most islands comprise limestone masses reaching heights of up to 400 metres and fringed by beaches and tropical rain forest. Caves and rock formations comprise picturesque elements. The park office is on Ko Wua Talap where bungalowstyle accommodation is available. Pupular attractions include Haad Chan Charat (Moonlight Beach), a high viewpoint and the Tam Bua Boke, or Waving Lotus Cave, named after spectacular stalactite and stalagmite formations. An emerald saltwater lake known as Talay Nai on Ko Mae Ko is the park's major attraction, and entails a strenuous climb. The resultant view is well worth the effort. Another popular venue is Ko Sam Sao where an extensive span or coral reef and huge rock arch offer scenic fascination. Visitors wishing to stay overnight on Ko Wua Talap should make advance bookings (and state whether meal services are required) through the Angthong Marine National Park, 145/1 Talatlang Rd., Muang District, Surat Thani 84000, Tel: (077) 283025 or the National Parks Division in Bangkok (Tel: 549-0529, 579-4842).

KO PHANGAN DISTRICT

Ko Phangan is an island, some 191 square kilometres in area, 60 minutes directly north of Ko Samui. The island offers few creature comforts and is explored largely by motorcycles along dirt trails. Attractions include the Tan Sadent Waterfall some 30 kilometres from the district office, the Laem Had Rin Beach, some 12 kilometres from the district office, and the Paeng National Park, 4 kilometres from the district office

Wat Khao Tham It is another mountaintop temple, located at Moo 1 Thumbol Ban Tai. With shady, serene atmosphere the place is ideal for serenity searchers where people can go for meditation practice.

Ko Tao is a Ko Phangan's Subdistrict. Its most rocky area covers two main islands: Ko Tao and Ko Nang Yuan. Looking back through the past, Ko Tao, like Ko Tarutao, was a place where political prisoners were detained. The major attraction of Ko Tao is the pristine nature of its beaches and coral reefs.

SPECIAL INTERESTS

Surat Thani's aforementioned national parks offer several opportunities for camping and trekking.

Camping facilities, which customarily provide cold running water and simple toilet amenities, are available at Khao Sok National Park and Angthong Marine National Park.

Trekking along either well-defined waterfall trails or nature trails, to visit caves or appreciate local flora and fauna, is a popular activity at both national parks.

Ornithologists can enjoy year-round bird-watching opportunities at the Angthong Marine National Park where numerous marine bird species are plentiful.

Water sport enthusiasts will find ample opportunities for swimming, windsurfing, snorkelling and scuba-diving at Ko Samui, Ko Pha Ngan, Ko Tao and Ko Nang Yuan, and snorkelling and scuba-diving opportunities in Angthong Marine National Park.

Buddhist meditation, both Vipassana (Insight) and Samatha (Tranquil), is taught in specialised courses by English-speaking instructors at Chaiya's Suan Mok. Would-be meditators are advised to contact the temple directly, and preferably in person.

Gourmets will certainly appreciate Surat Thani's oysters which are particularly large, succulent, have pure white flesh, lack a fishy smell and boast high nutritional value

SPECIAL EVENTS

Chak Phra Festival

Surat Thani celebrates the official end of the annual 3-month Buddhist Rains Retreat (Phansa), usually mid-October, with an impressive festival.

The Chank Phra Festival (literally 'the procession of hauling the Buddha image') stems from the belief that the Buddha ascended to heaven during Phansa to preach to his mother. The festival marks the Buddha's return to earth and is an occasion for religious meritmaking and general celebrations.

Local people organise dazzling land waterborne processions of revered Buddha images to symbolise the Buddha's return to earth) and boat races on the Tapi River where long boats, each manned by up to 50 oarsmen, are ebulliently raced.

Religious devotion, spectacle and merriment make Surat Thani's Chak Phra Festival a memorable event for every visitor.

Rambutan Fair

10-16 of August

The first rambutan tree was planted in Surat Thani in 1926, and this fair celebrates the delicious fruit, which now grows widely in the area. Highlights include exhibitions of local products and ornamental plants, floats adorned with rambutan and other fruits, and demonstrations of trained monkeys who harvest coconuts.

TRANSPORTATION

Transportation to Surat Thani

Surat Thani is linked with Bangkok by road, rail and air services. Flying time aboard a Thai Airways jet is 70 minutes. Rail time is approximately 13 hours, and most convenient by overnight train. Bus time is 10 hours.

Air schedules are available from Thai Airways (Tel: Bangkok 280-0070, 280-0080), or (Surat Thani) Tel: (077) 273-710, 273-355, 272-610

Rail schedules can be obtained from Bangkok's Hualampong Station (Tel: 233-3762) or Surat Thani Tel: (077) 311-213. The State Railways of Thailand offers a rail, bus and boat service at a special rate. Telephone Bangkok 223-7010, 233-7020 for complete details.

Airconditioned and regular coaches leave Bangkok's Southern Bus Terminal on Pinglao-Nakhon Chaisri Road (Tel: 414-4978-9), (Air) and 434-5558 (Regular) throughout the day.

Since fares are subject to change without notice, visitors are advised to check with the Terminal directly for current details.

SHOPPING

Major souvenir shops in Surat Thani and Koh Samui contain almost every handicraft produced in Thailand. Browsing to compare quality, and good-natured but determined bargaining will ensure favourable prices for readymade leisurewear and other apparel, and popular items such as basketry, palm leaf mobiles, ceramic decorations, lacquerware and brass receptacles and Thai silk and cotton lengths.

Local products of note are Chaiya district's Phumriang Village silk cloth which is produced largely in 5 original patterns, and jute, palm leaf and palmyra leaf headgear for men and women.

Samui island is noted for a wide range of coconut products. These include handbags made from coconut palm fronds, window screens, picture frames, brooms and fans.

DINING

Western cuisine is rarely found beyond hotel coffeeshops and bungalow resort dining rooms. Excellent Thai and Chinese cuisine prominently features local seafood, including fresh lobsters, oysters, crabs, fish, sharks, and assorted shellfish. Quality seafood restaurants are most numerous around the estaurine area of the Tapi River and at Ko Samui's Na Ton.

Other local culinary delicacies include salted eggs from Chaiya district, and the province's Rongrian Rambutans, purportedly the finest and sweetest in all of Thailand.

NEIGHBOURING PROVINCES

These include CHUMPHON to the north. Chumphon's provincial capital is 460 kilometres south of Bangkok by Highway No.4. Chumphon has a 222-kilometre-long coastline, almost 50 tropical islands offering numerous birds' nest caves and excellent scuba-diving waters, and several lovely palm-fringed beaches. These, combined with historic sites, forest waterfalls and caves, temples, picturesque fishing villages and comfortable accommodation attract increasing numbers of visitors.

RANONG to the northwest, 564 kilometres from Bangkok, offers the Jansom Thara Hot Spa Health Resort which draws water from Thailand's only Geo Thermal Mineral water Spring. Ranong offers a unique 'get-fit' holiday, forests, waterfalls and caves, several islands famous for gamefishing, and the Surin Islands National Marine Park, where two large islands have splendid beaches and spectacular underwater scenery in clear Indian Ocean waters.

And NAKHON SI THAMMARAT to the south, 784 kilometres from Bangkok, is the home of one of Thailand's oldest temples, Wat Phra Maha That. Nakhon Si Thammarat is the centre of southern Thai culture and handicrafts such as neilloware, yan lipao basketry, leather shadow-play figures and Thai silk brocades. The province also has many fine beaches, waterfalls and caves, and hosts each October the Prapheni Duan Sip festival when for 15 days relatives of people condemned to hell make merit to ease their suffering.

GENERAL INFORMATION

Tourist information is available from the Tourism Authority of Thailand Surat Thani office on Talat Mai Road. The information desk is open seven days a week, including public holidays, throughout the year, from 8.30 AM. to 4.30 PM.

Tourist police are attached to the TAT office on Talat Mai Road. Bilingual personnel provide speedy assistance to visitors in case of emergencies.
